Missouri Weekly Hay Summary

Warm weather is now becoming a must have rather than just a desire. Corn planting is only at 2 percent complete compared to a normal 32 percent average. Tillage is over a month behind and pastures are also seeing ratings fall due to a cool, extremely wet slow start to the growing season. These numbers could change in a hurry however if Mother Nature would cooperate. Most farmers are hitched up and sitting in the seat of their tractors looking out from the machine shed with the engine idling just waiting for a few rays of sun before they put it in gear and roll out. Warming nights have Alfalfa producers keeping a close look out for weevils in fields' slow growth will likely mean no choice but spraying before the first cutting this year.
