Fescue

Harvest is coming along well in southeast and southwest regions with most buying stations saying harvest has peaked and now on the downhill side. Many storage facilities in those areas are full as the crop yield, as expected, was quite high. The central, south central and northwest regions are just getting started with harvest. Moisture is slightly high in most fields and needing a couple more days to dry, but the crop is expected to be large there also. Buyers in those areas expecting harvest to peak before next week's report if the weather cooperates. The northeast region is generally flooded and unsure if farmers will get to seed or not. Some areas in that region received near 10 inches of rain on Tuesday. Prices for seed .43 wet and .45 dry, in all areas except the southeast .38 dry.
