As the year winds down cattle farmers are thankful for a mild feeding season thus far. Although feeding season is really just starting a mild fall and lack of bitter cold or much snow has resulted in cattle being in as good shape as anyone can recall any year previous. Although good for the cattleman the hay business continues to be very difficult. Many hay producers have even stopped advertising as the cost of ad space is not worth it with the lack of interest or inquires. Some loads to dairies or a few small bales of horse hay in the bed of a truck is about the only movement taking place. The supply of hay is moderate to heavy and demand is light. Prices are mostly steady.
