Missouri Weekly Hay Summary

The hay market is starting to see just an ever so slight uptick in activity. Although sales are still few, most of those taking place are local sales of large round bales between neighbors. Lower fuel cost has helped those dairies needing hay delivered. However, low milk prices have offset much of the benefit of lower fuel cost. Areas in Texas received more snow this past week than much of the state of Missouri has seen all winter thus far. The supply of hay is moderate to heavy and demand is light. Prices are steady.
