Most areas have wrapped up harvest after a week of good weather. Many stations planning to close after this weekend, expecting wind and rains to remove what little seed that has yet to be cut. Every region reported very good yields much unlike the yields of the past few years. Although total yields aren't tracked officially in Missouri estimates range from 85 -100 million lbs harvested this year. Average yields are considered to be around 70 million lbs. in the state. Most areas closing out the season with steady prices, a few stations slightly lower reflecting a drop in seed quality and demand as bins fill. Dry: Moisture 12-14% -Wet: Moisture greater than 14%. Prices per lb. Southwest, Northeast, Central, South Central: .43 wet, .45 dry; Northwest .40-.43 wet, .42-.45 dry; Southeast: .38 dry.
