Missouri Weekly Hay Summary

A strong cold front has settled in to the state this week, dropping temperatures but yet to bring the seasons first frost. Although many farmers fighting mud and wet crops the attempts to harvest grain have brought nearly all hay harvest to a end. Many farmers/producers have more than adequate supplies of hay on hand for a typical feeding season currently. Hay sales remain very slow with very few factors providing any indication that sales will increase in the short term. Most buyers that will need hay for winter feeding are currently more than willing to wait till closer to feeding season to build supplies as the market is in a very bearish state.
